2016–2017 Annual Report

An Opportunity to Help

When I started at WCC last year, I was excited to have a new job and eager to begin working at a community college for the first time. Since I had spent much of my 33-year career in higher education, I was a bit worried that this might be “more of the same.”

It’s absolutely not the same!

Although the setting is similar, the mission is quite different. And so are our students. Let me clarify.

WCC has the same high-achieving students that you might find at U-M, MSU or any other major university. But different from big research institutions, we have many students who are seeking the education and training that is provided at WCC specifically that will lead them to good paying jobs and careers.

I am delighted to be part of a foundation that can provide the resources needed to help many students to attend school and to stay in school. What I do today, is something quite different than I expected. It’s more direct, immediate and impactful.

I want to thank our generous donors for helping us to achieve this vital mission.

Sincerely,

We Are Grateful

On behalf of the Washtenaw Community College Foundation, I am excited to present to you and the community our 2016–17 Annual Report.

I was pleased to have served as the Foundation Board Chair during the past year and was proud to work with an excellent Board of Directors, a hard-working staff and many generous donors. As a long-serving board member, I have been privileged to see how the efforts of the Foundation have assisted thousands of students from Washtenaw County and beyond.

Through your support, the Foundation has continued to raise vital funds that will allow it to increase the number of scholarships it awards to deserving students, both now and into the distant future.

I hope you will take a few moments to review this Annual Report and read about the great progress the Foundation made over the past year. I know you will appreciate the detailed information and be inspired by the stories about our new endowment donors.

Please know that WCC Foundation will continue working diligently to ensure that even more students are given the chance for brighter futures.

Thank you again for your support, which helps to change people’s lives!

Sincerely,

ambition

“I want to give a big “thank you” because this scholarship will greatly help me pursue my dream.”

- Jessica Grogan

Since its founding in 1985, the Washtenaw Community College (WCC) Foundation has supported tens of thousands of students with tuition scholarships and assistance for transportation, food, childcare, books and unforeseen issues.

The WCC Foundation provided more than 1,000 scholarships during the 2016–17 school year to help students attend WCC. In addition, a newly established Student Emergency Fund offered quick and focused help to students who faced a variety of unexpected expenses. For more than three decades, caring individuals, corporate partners and innovative foundations have provided donations and grants that have helped the Foundation achieve its simple, but powerful mission—“to give hope and support to WCC students through scholarships and other philanthropic support, creating a better educated workforce and a stronger community.”

A Board of Directors, comprised of volunteer community leaders, contribute their expertise, time, resources and leadership to the Foundation, while a dedicated and professional staff works to ensure that annual goals, as well as the strategic plan, are accomplished.

Over the next year, the WCC Foundation will continue strengthening its engagement with the community so that it secures the resources necessary to help students stay in school and complete their degrees or certificates.

Supporting Success

WCC Mathematics Department Endowment

Kristin Good started teaching high school math 25 years ago only partly out of love for the subject. “What I really enjoy,” she says, “is coaching students and helping them master something they find intimidating.”

When Kristin came to WCC in 1997, she was impressed by what she found. Not only could she help her students conquer math, she could have an impact at a deeper level. “WCC really focuses on the complete student,” she says. “We provide social, emotional, and physical support as well as academic. We care about the whole person becoming successful and moving on.”

A few years ago, Kristin and her fellow math teachers decided to fund a scholarship for their students. This year—her first as academic Dean of Arts and Sciences—that scholarship became fully endowed. The award will acknowledge the efforts of one math student each year. “We wanted to give students a chance to be successful in an environment that’s very supporting and nurturing for people who haven’t had a lot of success,” she says. “We want to provide an opportunity for them to not have to stress about money.”

“This place is such a gem,” Kristin concludes. “I’m a humongous fan. We’re so grateful for what we have here. With this endowment, we want to give back to the college. And we want to say thanks to our students for all their hard work.”

A Creative Tribute

Galen W. Davis Endowment

Maryam Barrie has put aside part of her paycheck for the WCC Foundation since she started teaching English at the college 32 years ago. Having attended WCC herself in the 1980s and then graduating from the University of Michigan, she sees WCC as unique in the Ann Arbor area. “The students here are more invested in their own education,” she says. “They put part of their lives on hold so they can accomplish something. I appreciate the genuineness of their efforts. They’re not here to fulfill their mom’s or dad’s dreams; they’re here for their own dreams.”

The Barrie family all have deep connections to the college. Maryam’s husband, Paul, has taken courses at WCC, and their two daughters attended WCC’s Washtenaw Technical Middle College during their high school years. Their eldest daughter, Morgan, currently teaches photography classes in the Digital Media Arts department. “We’ve all taken advantage of the benefits here,” Maryam says.

In 2003, the Barrie family lost dear friend Galen Davis to AIDS-related illness. “I’d known him since childhood,” Maryam says. Davis, a gifted draftsman and artist, lived in Chicago where he sold his art through various galleries and did commercial graphic design. “He was great with my girls,” she says, “always up for doing a creative project with them. He made Paul laugh like nobody else.”

Immediately after Galen’s death, Maryam began to fund the scholarship in his name that became fully endowed this year. “Galen always regretted not having the opportunity to go to college,” she says. “He had to start work to support himself before graduating from high school. I wanted to do this for him.” Although the scholarship is not restricted, Maryam hopes it will go to LGBTQ students pursuing a future in art. “That would be a very fitting tribute.”

Creating a Cycle of Giving

Scholarship Endowments

Longtime supporters of education, Menakka and Essel Bailey have endowed two WCC scholarships this year. The scholarships commemorate their grandchildren, Kaya Spielberg and Thomas Murray McDougal. “This is our way of getting them involved,” says Menakka. “They’re only 10 years old, but we thought it was important for them to realize they need to give to the community because they’re privileged enough to have a good education.”

Originally from Sri Lanka, Menakka taught at the University of Michigan as a lecturer in anthropology before going into administration. “I see education as the primary thing that will change the economic and social disparities in this country and around the world,” she says.

After retiring from the university, she and Essel, formerly a lawyer for Dykema, formed investment companies oriented toward long-term care and assisted living. Their interest in health care for the aged helped prompt their decision to fund the scholarships for WCC: they would like to support students pursuing a degree in nursing. “There’s a very great need for more good nurses in long-term care,” says Essel.

Menakka, a strong advocate for education for women in particular, hopes the scholarships will go to women returning to work after an absence. “I think one of WCC’s great strengths is that it helps people from the community get back into the workforce,” she says. “It does a good job of supporting people who want to get an education in order to go back to work, like women who have taken time off for child care. We want to be part of making that happen.”

A Legacy of Hope

Judith James Wood Carlson Endowment

Ron Carlson's late wife, Judith, had a heart for the kind of kid who didn't have it easy in life. As Washtenaw County's first female juvenile court judge, Judith watched too many kids come through her courtroom without the resources or support that could have made a difference. "That's when she became a big supporter of WCC," says Ron. "Some of the kids in juvenile detention went to school and tried to overcome the difficulties they had. When they came out, they didn't have the kind of paper trail to get into other institutions, but Washtenaw was there for them. She was a big fan."

Judith was no stranger to adversity herself. As a single mom with Type 1 diabetes, she worked full time while going to law school, taking her four-year-old son to class with her. She and Ron met and married when they worked together at the Washtenaw Public Defender's office in the 1970s.

Twenty years later, the Carlsons moved to Colorado and practiced law together as Judith continued to fight for children's rights. When she passed away this year, Ron endowed a WCC scholarship in her name. "I'd like it to go to any students who had difficult teen years," he says. "Maybe with preference to kids who went through juvenile court. Judi always said kids deserve our best shot. I hope this scholarship continues her goals."

“.. the kids in juvenile detention tried to overcome the difficulties ... Washtenaw was there for them.”

“Students are the reason we have a remarkable and successful community”

Life-Changing Impact

Susan Pollay and the Harry A. Pollay Scholarship

As executive director for the Downtown Development Authority of Ann Arbor, Susan Pollay gets to work for the city she has come to love. But it wasn't until she sat on the board of the WCC Foundation and listened to students' stories that she realized the impact the college had on her community.

“Ann Arbor needs these students,” she says. “They're a fundamental reason we have the remarkable and successful community that we do. You name any WCC program, there's a positive influence it has on the city.”

Pollay was particularly struck by the life-changing impact that scholarships had on students who previously hadn't thought anyone believed in them. “I'm so inspired by them, the obstacles they overcome,” she says. When she discovered “You didn't have to be wealthy to contribute,” she decided to endow a scholarship in her father's name.

Harry Pollay, a lifelong learner and voracious reader, got his MBA while working full time and raising a family. “From the moment I was born, Dad said I would go to college,” she says. His commitment to his children's education never wavered, even when he lost his job for several years. “Somehow he still put three kids through school.”

“There's a Yiddish word, ‘mensch,’” she continues. “It means a real human being of integrity. That's what my dad was. I'll never know most of the people who benefit from this scholarship in his name, but I'm so grateful to know that, in some way, the college will be there for them just as my dad was for me.”

Susan Pollay

An Alumni Gives Back

Tim & Kathy Norton Endowment Fund

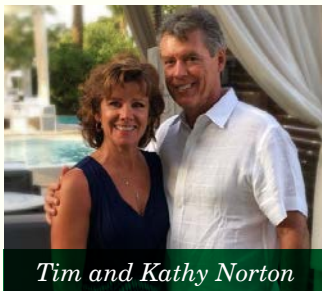

The Tim and Kathy Norton Endowment Fund was begun in December of 2013, and completed during the 2016–17 school year thanks to generous annual gifts from the Nortons. The endowment will grow interest for one year, and will begin making awards next school year to assist students where the need is greatest.

“Kathy and I feel very good about having endowed a scholarship at WCC, for multiple reasons,” said Tim. “Not known to all, but Kathy is a WCC grad, with not one but two associate degrees,” he explained. “The school was a very instrumental outlet to her, and to both of us, a young couple attempting to juggle our educations, career goals and starting a new family.”

Their endowment was not their only gift to the college. Tim was a Foundation Board Member from 2005–2011. “When I was approached to become a member of the WCC Foundation, it was an easy response given our personal experience with the school as well as what we had additionally gleaned as members of the Ann Arbor and greater Washtenaw County community.”

Tim is happy to support students at WCC. “We regard the school as the provider of significant source of opportunity to a wide variety of people and circumstance. As a six-year board member of the WCC Foundation, I was continually impressed by the commitment of my fellow board members, the College personnel that we were in regular contact with, and even more so by the overall mission of the Foundation and the students it serves.”
